SUPPORT URGED Farmer-Labor Party To Enter Candidate In By-Election Race

The Edmonton branch of the Alberta Farmer-Labor party (C.C.F.) decided Thursday night, at a general membership meeting, to contest the by-election caused by the death of D. M. Marshall Says Americans Will Invade Europe

WEST POINT, N.Y., May 29.—(AP)—An invasion of the European continent was promised to-day by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff, who told the West Point graduating class that American troops "are landing in England, and they will land in France."

Marshall said the army would total nearly 4,000,000 men by the end of this year, instead of the previously announced estimate of 3,000,000. During the next few weeks, said the chief of staff, the army will be increased from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000.

"Your utmost endeavor, backed by high and unselfish purpose, will be required to bring this to a triumphant conclusion," he told the graduating class.

"No compromise is possible, and the victory of the democracies can only be complete with the utter defeat of the war machines of Germany and Japan."

Gaining significance in view of the current discussion of high ranking American army officers with British officials in London, Marshall's assertion that American forces "will land in France," was the first definite statement of any American official that a ground offensive against the continent is a part of American-British strategy.

Fallow Plans Trip Through South, North

To inspect highway work and flood damage in western and central Canada, Mr. W. A. Fallow, provincial minister of public works, left the city Friday for Calgary. The minister said he would also make a tour of business in the southern part of the province.

Damage of approximately $300,000 occurred in the High River district as a result of recent floods caused by the overflow of the Highwood river. The minister said he would get first-hand information on the flood situation.

On his return to Edmonton the minister plans to leave for an inspection of Northern Alberta highways, accompanied by G. H. N. Monkman, deputy minister of public works. They will leave the city Monday and expect to be in the northern country three or four days. A visit to Grande Prairie is included in the minister's itinerary.

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Guenther

NEW YORK, May 28.—(BUP)—One of the closing chapters in the saga of a fabulous horse will be written in the hours of this week. Whirlaway, the bush-tailed king of the turf, will stretch his royal legs in the $400,000 Suburban handicap. Simultaneously, his many loyal admirers expect him to stretch his royal income beyond $400,000.

As odds on such affairs are rarely in an even money proposition that the chestnut beauty from the bluegrass belt will do it. For that reason, the Memorial Day classic at beautiful Belmont should be truly historic. At last count the catamount of Calumet had raked in $271,811. A Suburban victory would put him over the hump.

Only one horse ever has won as much as $400,000. That was your friend, my friend, everybody's friend—the multitraveled Seabiscuit. The old guy finally got up there after years of patient and painful climbing. His exact mark, highest in history, is $427,720. This puts him approximately $66,000 ahead of Whirlaway, but only tentatively.

Must Beat Good Ones

FOR barring the hazards of a breakdown, which are present 24 hours a day, Whirlaway figures to cut the difference in half in the Suburban. He will have all the good ones to beat—Belmont, Milano, Market Wae, Attention and others—but he has defeated them before and he should defeat them again. After that, it will be easy.

There are some who say that for Whirlaway it always has been easy. He is probably the only one of the potentially great thoroughbreds of the last decade who hasn't been smacked by the jinx which always takes the best. Dozens of famous horses have been knocked out by that jinx—Bismarck, Sledgeham, Lavin, Dauter and even Chalden himself.

Certainly Whirlaway hasn't fought the fight that Seabiscuit did. At last Sun Beas did. To him, it has been once and a triumph after another. His only real opposition has come from himself. This was during the brief spell last spring when he was the terrible-tempered Mr. Bangs of the tracks. He insisted on rushing wide.

Earns $271,811 in 61 Minutes

BUT big Ben Jones cured that quick and since then the middle-aged son of crazy old Bismarck has been on the high road. He won $77,275 as a juvenile and another $272,800 at three. This year he picked up $20,000 in the Dixie, but he hasn't had a chance yet to get really rolling. Even so, the ease with which he has won jolts the imagination.

If my arithmetic is correct, he has earned his $271,811 in approximately one hour and seven minutes of actual elapsed running time. Even the most seldom known fact is fast faster than that. Sure, it looks easy. But it looks easy because Whirlaway is a horse among 100,000 horses. To the really great performer, almost anything looks pretty easy.

Although Whirlaway hasn't been best by injuries, he has had his tough runs occasionally. He lost the Arlington classic to a second-string horse and lost almost $400,000 with it. He lost the Jersey Gold cup to Market Wae although he broke a North American record in losing. And he was cut out of a potential $150,000 during the winter.

Through By Mid-Summer

By circumstances, Whirlaway already would be over that hump. Instead, he is forced to go the hard way for the first—and probably the last—time in his meteoric career. For once he pauses the Biscuit, Whirlaway would be with us long. He has another job to do.

He will be retired to domestic life and he will send up his sons to carry on where he leaves off. The happy ending in the saga should be provided around the middle of the summer. It should come in either the Butler or the Massachusetts handicap. After that, Whirlaway's days will be numbered. He'll go back to his bluegrass home. I'll be somewhat regretful the day Whirlaway passes the Biscuit, for the Biscuit was my horse among all horses. He won't be around to defend his crown, because he has retired to the domestic life himself. But even in his absence, his tradition will carry on. Whirlaway will beat his mark, but as with every horse who ever beat him, Whirlaway will have to break the all-time record to do it.

28 Days Racing At Winnipeg

Over 400 Nags Ready For Whittier Opening Saturday

WINNIPEG, May 29.—(CP)—Winnipeg's 1942 racing season opens at Whittier Park Saturday when the banglata start the 28-day meet. The horses will run for 14 days at the St. Boniface track and then move to Polo Park to complete the meet.

More than 400 horses are scheduled at the two race tracks. The racehorse special arrived here from Calgary Thursday where they just completed the spring meet.

The eight-day meeting at Calgary featured the Alberta Derby, which was won by Brown's Sentry, an entry from N. Pitt's stable of Winnipeg, along with Fighting Finn, who finished second.

Ninety-seven trainers are on hand for the local meet. Many of the conditions are men who have worked on the circuit for many years. Others are making their first appearance, among them are William Alexander, winner in 1941 was the string, including many handicap stars, including many of the finest ever to come to the west.

Twilight racing will be introduced to Winnipeg fans for the first time this season. The first race is scheduled for a p.m. daily, with the exception of Saturday's and Dominion Day, when the first race will start at 2:30 p.m.

Racing fans of this city will also experience a little more difficulty reaching the race track at Whittier Park due to war-time restrictions. Special buses that run fans from

Robinson Beats Servo By Low Swing May Have Lost Fight

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP)—Ray Robinson ran his all-victorious string to 121 triumphs in a row as a fighter Thursday night, but he never came closer to having it broken than he did in going all out to take a 10-round decision from Marty Servo before a roaring, thrilled crowd in Madison Square Garden. Robinson weighed 144; Servo 143.

On the Associated Press score card, Robinson won by a margin of one round. And this margin might have been the second, in which both fighters were guilty of hitting low, but for last-night referee Billy Cavanagh penalized only Servo with loss of the next fight.

After the verdict was announced, the booing was so loud that announcer Harry Balogh was unable to make himself heard sufficiently over the public address system to introduce the next fight.

Though referee Cavanagh took the second round away from the coast guardman from Schenectady, N.Y., without first warning him, he took the trouble of warning the skinny Harlem hammer for using his head in the final round, and then did not penalize him.

A crowd of 14,775 continued to a gross take of $31,570.

For action and punch-meats fireworks, there have been few clout-puffs in Madison Square Garden late Thursday night's fight. From start to finish, the kid from up-state carried the fight to the up-town Afro-weaver, who went into his 1-10th round, and it wasn't until the third round that Robinson's bolo punches under the heart began to pull him through.

From start to finish, the kid from up-state carried the fight to the up-town Afro-weaver, who went into his 1-10th round, and it wasn't until the third round that Robinson's bolo punches under the heart began to pull him through.

Robinson's margin was by a split decision, Cavanagh, after probably seeing Servo's fight by taking the second round away from him, voted for Marty as the winner. Judges Bill Hedden and Tom Curley judged for Robinson.

Cavanagh voted five rounds for Servo, three for Robinson and two even. Healy had Robinson in front five rounds, three with one a dead heat. And Curley surprised just about everyone by coming up with a score card showing nine rounds for Robinson and one for Servo.

This was a return to go of a bout last Sept. 25, in which Robinson came through with a decision by a last-minute rally. Servo and he joined the contest guided to his off-time tried to get the re-match. Twice Robinson refused to meet him. Last night Marty scored heavily through the first two rounds by charging into the back rounds and swinging short hard hooks to head and body. In the second, Robinson swung one low and the crowd boomed. Then Marty dropped one out of bounds, and again the crowd cheered. For this, Cavanagh advised the judges at the end of the heat that he was taking it away from Marty for a low blow.

STARTS IN THIRD

In the third, Robinson started to connect with long swinging right and both shots under the heart, and he kept on with these as his chief offensive weapon the rest of the way. Marty, meantime, just marched right in, fighting from a half-couch, and kept banging away, when, far from being floored or knocked out, as most folks had expected, he was right in the swinging as well as the finish that he won the final heat.

Before last night's tussle, Promoter Mike Jacobs had announced that the winter would meet Garvey Young of Akron, Ohio, here June 11. Ray would rather meet welterweight champion Red Cowan—Red's in the navy, in California.

An examination in his dressing room after the bout disclosed that Robinson had injured the knuckle of the middle finger on his left hand. He said the mishap occurred when he landed a punch on Servo's head.

Winnipeg, May 28.—(CP)—Trainer Fred Dipoli and the 3 of his horses, Samur and O'Dolan, have been suspended for 30 days, pending steward George W. Schilling of the Western Canada racing circuit announced early Wednesday.

Judge Schilling said the suspension became effective when it was found that a saliva test on the horse Camanche, a winner at Chiswick Park, Calgary, May 21 had been returned positive.

Man In Her Heart

By Rob Eden

CHAPTER XXXIII

WHEN Anne left the track she admitted she was beaten. The conversation between Pat and Doc left her crushed and she knew that her well of courage had run dry. For the first time she confessed to herself that she had cherished the hope that somehow she and Rusty would get back to the care-free footing where they had been before he went with the Van Evers stable.

It was that hope which had kept her going during the dark hours when she had lost Moon Jade. The same hope that had made her refuse to admit defeat with the man she loved, and kept driving her on to the hopeless task of getting Kokoa in condition for the race.

ONE MAN FOR ANNE
Now she faced the fact of her defeat squarely and honestly knowing that Rusty meant more to her than any other man in the world.

She realized that even while she had toyed with the idea of accepting Pat's proposal, she hadn't considered it seriously in her inner heart.

It was Rusty she wanted. It was Rusty she saw when she had closed her eyes as Pat drove her toward and they talked about marriage.

Her dream was gone. Blown away like a cloud.

Lois of Johnny Rains for the first time had already created the fortune chance which had kept her going even in the face of this knowledge that Doc wanted convinced it was worth the effort.

A LETTER
Wearily she climbed to her second floor apartment, fumbled for the key and unlocked the door. On the floor was a letter that he had thrust in the mail slot.

She slumped into a chair, a complete picture of despair and there were tears in her eyes. They were the tears of a fighter who had done his best only to find that it hasn't been good enough.

FOUGHT AND LOST
How long ago, she didn't know. For the first time in days, she permitted herself the luxury of complete relaxation. She had fought and lost, and that was all that was left in the world couldn't change it now. Anne was suddenly aware of a flat beam of light shining through the slatted bars of the venetian blinds. A bitter laugh escaped her as her eyes followed it across the room to where it was diffused on the table before her.

How silly she had been to think that her simple little invention would succeed after her father had tried every trick he knew to cure Kokoa of his lack of lunging out.

The beam seemed to centre on the envelope she had carelessly cast aside, and arousing herself she slipped on the light and picked it up. In the upper left hand corner was the conventional "Return in five days to Dr. Lee's Sanatorium, Phoenix, Ariz."

"Probably more bills for extra," she thought, and dropped it back on the table. Well, they could wait awhile. Perhaps a shower and change of clothes and then a cup of coffee would make her feel better.

She put the coffee on, then took a bath and by the time she had finished, it was percolating noisily on the electric stove.

With her kimono wrapped about her, she poured a cup of coffee and drove it down to the kitchen.

There were no bills after all, just a typewritten letter and a note which fell out when she opened it.

She glanced quickly at the letter, saw something about her father's condition and supposed the usual report of progress. Then she examined the slip of paper that had been inside. Her heart leaped as she recognized the spawling handwriting. It was a note from Old Tim—the first he had written since he had been in the sanatorium. Eagerly she read:

"Dearest Anne: Doc Lee is letting me write a few words to you'll know how much I've improved. I'm counting on you in the stake and I'll be waiting for your wire right after the race. Doc says it's okay if I don't get too excited. It takes an awful lot to beat us Lauries, and we're not licked yet by a long shot. All my love—"

"Tim."

Tears filled her eyes, overjoyed and ran down her cheeks as she read the note again. She reached out for her cup, found the coffee cold and emptied it.

Then she poured a fresh cup. It was too hot, but she gulped it down, and then another one.

"What a fine daughter I've turned out to be," she exclaimed, picking up the letter.

ing up Dr. Lee's letter again. This time she read it carefully.

He reported Tim had improved marvelously in the last few days. He doubt knows as of the day of the big race nearing.

"Lisa, counting so strongly on your horse winning," the humorous, lighthearted note, "that I hate to think that might happen if it doesn't. But from your letter, I judge you're pretty confident, so I guess there's nothing to worry about."

"If there should be some slip up, it would be best for you to fly here and see Tim about it yourself. If the news came suddenly, it might cause a very serious setback."

"I can get him off about the failure of your telegram to arrive until you get here."

Dr. Lee closed by wishing her the best of luck and congratulating her on the great fight she had put up on her father's behalf.

WHITE LIES
"Boy, what a pool the two of them have put me in!" Anne exclaimed. She had deliberately stretched things in cheerful letters to her father, but she hadn't realized that he would take every word as gospel.

And now her white lies and even Tim were about to catch up with her.

"What in the world am I going to do?" She walked the floor, her knees knocking behind, until finally she flapping so annoyed her that she flung it into a corner and dressed.

While she was pulling on her stockings, an idea occurred to her—the first that seemed to have the slightest hint of being practical.

"Why not?" she demanded. She got her car from the garage and headed for Doc's rooming house.

If he approved her plan, she'd go through with it.

The vet was on the front porch talking with Kate Murphy when the girl drove up. In fact, they were in deep conversation.

He started gaily when Anne suddenly called his name.

"What a lovely girl," he said, with the candor and was inclined to hold her responsible for the way the race had been backed.

"I can't understand it," Kate had been saying. "I never knew the plan to fail before."

Doc was in the midst of a vigorous defense when Anne's voice interrupted. He got to his feet and walked down to the car.

"What's on your mind, teach?" he asked.

Quickly, she outlined her plan. "I believe if we could run Kokoa in a race once with his new blinkers, with Johnny on his back, it might do him a world of good," she explained.

"If he goes through this idea," she knew he finally got the idea we've been trying to drill into him."

"Then we have a chance next Saturday when Sammy rides."

"Johnny?" Johnny's stare up with Count. "You're for the big race, not for the trial."

Burgess pondered the suggestion for several minutes. "I think it's a sound idea, Anne," he said at last. "If we can make Kokoa can straighten once, there's a good chance that he's cured. He needs a hard workout and this race will give it to him."

He courage returning with the encouragement Doc had given her, Anne went home and about soundly for the first night in weeks.

Johnny Rains arrived at the stables. He got to his feet and the next morning, ready to help school Sammy.

He said he could do that much for Anne, and he continued doing him until Count or his agent stopped him.

The boy was a bit doubtful, however, when the plan of riding him that afternoon in a race was broached.

"I don't know whether I can or not," he said. "You'll have to see Terry."

"Of course," Anne answered. "All I wanted you to say was that you'd take a chance on riding the race for us, even though Kokoa isn't completely broken to the blinkers yet."

She found the boy's agent playing cards in the commissary, and told him she wanted to use Johnny that afternoon.

"It'll cost you 50 bucks," he said. "His price has gone up."

"I don't care what it costs, but I want Johnny. It's a matter of life or death."

"I gotta see a guy first. I'll let you know in an hour," Terry answered. "Okay."

SCRATCH KOKOA
But when the agent had failed to come around by eleven o'clock, Anne went looking for him.

She had only until noon to scratch Kokoa from the race, which was what she intended to do unless Johnny could be on his back.

Terry, however, either was deliberately hiding out or had been called away from the track on business. Neither she nor Doc could locate him until shortly after one o'clock.

"How about Johnny?" Anne demanded. The agent shook his head. "You're outa luck, Miss Laurie. Count just notified me he wants Johnny on Moon Jade this afternoon."

"But you told me—" Anne started, desperately.
